I.STATEMENT OF FACTS

Material witness, EPIFANIO BARAJAS-RODRIGUEZ (“BARAJAS”) was apprehended on July 8, 2008, in Carrizo Springs by United States Border Patrol Agents. Defendants JOSE HERNANDEZ-RIVAS and GERARDO SALTO-ROCHA, the alleged guides of the groups, are charged with bringing in aliens resulting in death in violation of Title 8, United States Code, Section 1324 (a)(a)(A)(i) among other charges. Material witness BARAJAS remains in custody and he has no prospects for securing release on bond.

II.SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

No material witness may be held in custody merely because he cannot provide surety for a bond. Once the material witness moves to take his own videotape deposition, the court must order a video deposition unless the opposing party meets its burden to show video deposition and release of the material witness would result in a failure of justice. While the defendant has made no showing of a failure of justice, BARAJAS, has been unable to secure bond during the three weeks he has been in custody. Thus, given the defendant’s inability to show a failure of justice and the fact that BARAJAS is a minor, the material witness must be immediately deposed and released.

III.POINTS AND AUTHORITIES*A. *Deposition is Mandated by Statute1) 18 U.S.C.S. § 3144

Congress specifically enacted a statute to deal with the issue presented in this case, i.e., material witnesses who remain incarcerated owing solely to their inability to secure bond. In unmistakably plain language, Congress outlawed prolonged incarceration of such persons without substantial justification. “No material witness may be detained because of inability to comply with any condition of release if the testimony of such witness can be secured by deposition, and if further detention is not necessary to prevent a failure of justice.” 18 U.S.C.

1 § 3144. “Upon such a showing, the district court must order [the witness’] deposition and 2 prompt release.” Torres-Ruiz v. United States District Court for the Southern District of 3 California, 120 F.3d 933, 935 (9th Cir. 1997) (quoting Aguilar-Ayala v. Ruiz, 973 F.2d 411, 413 4 (5th Cir. 1992)) (emphasis in original).

2) Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 15

Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 15(a)(2), provides that

A witness who is detained under 18 U.S.C. § 3144 may request to be deposed by filing a written motion and giving notice to the parties. The court may then order that the deposition be taken and may discharge the witness after the witness signs under oath the deposition transcript.

Under such circumstances, “[i]f the deposition would prove admissible over any objection under the Confrontation Clause of the United States Constitution or the Federal Rules of Evidence, then the material [witness] must be deposed rather than detained.” Aguilar-Ayala, 973 F.2d at 413 (emphasis added).

15 Prolonged incarceration of BARAJAS solely because of his inability to secure bond thus 16 violates the clearly stated intent of Congress and straightforward rulings by the Court of Appeals 17 prohibiting such practices. “[I]t is clear from a conjunctive reading [of Rule 15(a)] with 18 [Section] 3144 that the discretion to deny the motion is limited to those instances in which the 19 deposition would not serve as an adequate substitute for the witness’ live testimony: that a failure 20 of justice would ensue were the witness released. Absent a failure of justice, the witness must be 21 released.” Torres-Ruiz, 120 F.3d at 935 (citing Aguilar-Ayala, at 413 (internal citations and 22 quotations omitted)).

3) Defendant Has Not Met His Burden to Defeat the Motion for Video Deposition

To defeat a motion for video deposition of a material witness, the burden is on the opposing party to show admission of deposition testimony will result in a “failure of justice.” 18 U.S.C.S. § 3144; Torres-Ruiz, at 935. To meet this burden, the defendant must make a plausible

1 showing the witness' testimony would be both material and favorable to his defense. See United 2 States v. Valenzuela-Bernal, 458 U.S. 858, 867 (1982).

3 In Valenzuela-Bernal, the defendant was charged with transporting an illegal alien.
4 Valenzuela-Bernal, 458 U.S. at 860. The Government detained the illegal alien as a material
5 witness (Witness No. 1) but deported two other witnesses (Witnesses Nos. 2 and 3) (also illegal 6 aliens) before defendant was able to interview them. Id. at 861. Defendant appealed, claiming 7 deportation of Witnesses Nos. 2 and 3 deprived him of the opportunity to determine whether 8 their testimony would aid his defense. Id. According to the Supreme Court, even though the 9 defendant knew what Witnesses 2 and 3 might have said to him to indicate whether Witness No.
10 1 had legal status to be present in this country, the defendant failed to show how the deported 11 witnesses' testimony would have been helpful to his defense. Id. at 874.

12 [I]t should be remembered that [defendant] was present throughout 13 the commission of this crime. No one knows better than he what 14 the deported witnesses actually said to him, or in his presence, that 15 might bear upon whether he knew that [Witness No. 1] was an 16 illegal alien who had entered the country within the past three 17 years. And, in light of the actual charge made in the indictment, it 18 was only the status of [Witness No. 1] which was relevant to the 19 defense. [Witness No. 1], of course, remained fully available for 20 examination by the defendant and his attorney. We thus conclude 21 that the [defendant] can establish no Sixth Amendment violation 22 without making some plausible explanation of the assistance he 23 would have received from the testimony of the deported witnesses.

25
26
27
28 Valenzuela-Bernal, 458 U.S. at 871.

29 The Supreme Court's reasoning applies with even greater force in this case. In 30 Valenzuela-Bernal, the witnesses were deported before the defendant had the opportunity to 31 interview them. Here, the defendant has had the opportunity to interview the material witness 32 while he has been incarcerated for the past three weeks. Despite this opportunity, the defendant 33 has produced no evidence, nor has the defendant made any showing the witness has material 34 information helpful to the defense. In short, the defendant has made no showing of a failure of 35 justice. Consequently, the material witness must be deposed and released.

1 B. A Material Witness Does Not Have to Show Exceptional Circumstances To 2 Request A Videotape Deposition.

3 The plain language of Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 15(a)(2) demonstrates 4 that a material witness who files a motion for his own deposition is not required to demonstrate 5 exceptional circumstances. Where a material witness moves for a Rule 15 deposition, he need 6 not show such “exceptional circumstances.” United States v. Chen, 214 F.R.D. 578, 579 (N.D.
 7 Cal. 2003); see also, Aguilar-Ayala v. Ruiz, 973 F.2d at 420 (5th Cir. 1992) (ff. 6); United States
 8 v. Allie, 978 F.2d 1401, 1404 (5th Cir. 1992).

9 “Witnesses detained under § 3144 are explicitly excepted from demonstrating exceptional 10 circumstances to effectuate their own deposition.” Aguilar-Ayala v. Ruiz, 973 F.2d at 420 (5th 11 Cir. 1992) (ff. 6)(emphasis added); see also, United States v. Allie, 978 F.2d 1401, 1404 (5th Cir.
 12 1992). Indeed, Rule 15(a)(2), which addresses the process for a detained material witness to 13 seek a deposition, does not even mention exceptional circumstances.

14 The confusion regarding the requirement of exceptional circumstances was clarified in 15 2002 when Congress amended Rule 15(a) to distinguish motions brought by material witnesses
 16 for depositions from motions brought by other parties, United States v. Chen, 214 F.R.D. at 580 17 (ff. 2), thus implying that motions for a deposition brought by a material witness does not require 18 a showing of exceptional circumstances. “Before the amendment, it was unclear whether the 19 ‘exceptional circumstances’ standard applied when a material witness moved for a deposition.
 20 The amendment makes clear that this heightened standard only applies to a motion made by a 21 party.” United States v. Chen, 214 F.R.D. at 580 (ff. 2)(emphasis in original). Only Rule 22 15(a)(1), which addresses where a party seeks a deposition of a prospective witness, addresses 23 the exceptional circumstances requirement. Thus, it is only where parties other than the detained 24 material witness file a motion for the witness’ deposition that a showing of exceptional 25 circumstances is required. See, Fed. Rule Crim. Pro., Rule 15(a)(1); see also, Chen, 214 F.R.D.
 26 at 579; Allie, 978 F.2d at 1404.

27 Therefore, material witness BARAJAS does not have to make a showing of exceptional 28 circumstances.

1 C. Deposition Preserves Defendants' Rights

2 1) Deposition Preserves Defendant's Sixth Amendment Right to

3 Confrontation

4 Under ideal circumstances, the material witness would be deposed and released and 5 would subsequently return for the defendant's trial. The Office of the United States Attorney in 6 fact employs well-established procedures to ensure such a result. Prior to release, the 7 Government is required to serve each material witness with a subpoena for the trial date and a 8 travel fund advance letter. Thus, under ideal circumstances, each material witness would return 9 for trial and questions about preserving defendant's right to confront and cross-examine the 10 material witnesses would be moot.

11 Even if the material witness does not return for trial, his deposition will be admissible in 12 lieu of live testimony. See Rivera, at 1207. Admission of prior-recorded testimony by a witness 13 who is unavailable for trial has in fact been upheld for more than a century. In 1895, the 14 Supreme Court held admission of testimony given at a defendant's first trial by a witness who 15 died before the second trial did not violate the confrontation clause. Mattox v. United States, 156 16 U.S. 237 (1895). Since that time, courts have consistently upheld the principle that prior-17 recorded testimony later admitted at trial does not violate a defendant's Sixth Amendment 18 confrontation rights so long as: (1) there is some exceptional circumstance where, in the interests 19 of justice, it is necessary to take and preserve testimony outside the court; (2) the prior testimony 20 was given at a hearing, proceeding or deposition; (3) an authorized person put the witness under 21 oath; (4) the defendant had the right to be present; (5) the defendant was represented by counsel 22 who was given a complete and adequate opportunity to cross-examine the witness; and (6) the 23 witness meets the criteria for unavailability. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28 and 30; Fed. R. Evid. 804(a);
 24 see also California v. Green, 399 U.S. 149, 165-166 (1970); Torres-Ruiz at 933; Aguilar-Ayala 25 at 413.

26 As shown above, this case, the interests of justice mandate taking and preserving the 27 material witness's testimony outside the court, i.e., by video deposition. The defendant's rights 28 under the Sixth Amendment are preserved by the statutory requirements for a deposition,

1 including the presence of a person authorized to put the witness under oath, the defendant's right 2 to be present, the defendant's right to be represented by counsel, and the defendant's right to 3 completely and adequately cross-examine the witness. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28 and 30. Moreover, 4 these procedural requirements provide a sufficient indicia of reliability to "[afford the trier of 5 fact a satisfactory basis for evaluating the truth of the prior statement," further protecting 6 defendant's rights under the confrontation clause. California v. Green, 399 U.S. at 161.

7 Finally, if a material witness fails to return for trial, the deposition will be admissible, as 8 the material witness would meet the requirements for unavailability. In the context of this case, 9 an unavailable witness is one who is out of the United States, providing the absence of the 10 witness was not procured by the party offering the deposition, or a witness whose attendance 11 cannot be procured by subpoena. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 15; Fed. R. Evid. 804(a). Where a 12 material witness has left the United States voluntarily or even by forced deportation, the witness' 13 later absence from trial does not violate the defendant's rights under the confrontation clause 14 provided the Government makes a reasonable effort to assure the witness' attendance at trial.
 15 Aguilar-Ayala, at 418 (quoting Ohio v. Roberts, 448 U.S. 56, 65 (1980)); see also Rivera, at 16 1207.

17 In U.S. v. Eufracio-Torres, before the material witnesses were forcibly deported, the 18 Government, using procedures similar to those presently employed in the Southern District of 19 California, served them with trial subpoenas and instructed them on how to return for trial and 20 obtain the necessary travel funds. U.S. v. Eufracio-Torres, 890 F. 2d 266, 270 (1989). Although 21 the witnesses did not appear for trial, the Court of Appeals held their deposition testimony was 22 admissible under such circumstances, where the Government used "good faith" and "reasonable 23 means" to assure that the witnesses would attend trial. U.S. v. Eufracio-Torres, 890 F. 2d at 271.
 24 "So long as the government has employed reasonable measures to secure the witness' presence at 25 trial, the fact that the witness has nevertheless failed to appear will not preclude the admission of 26 deposition testimony. Such a witness will be deemed 'unavailable' and the deposition is 27 admissible over the defendant's Confrontation Clause and hearsay objections." Aguilar-Ayala, 28 at 418 (quoting Ohio v. Roberts, 448 U.S. at 65); see also Fed. R. Evid. 804(a).

1 Thus, even if the United States Attorney's reasonable and well-established procedures 2 fail to obtain the material witness's attendance at trial, statutory procedures for the taking of the 3 deposition preserves defendant's Sixth Amendment confrontation rights, and the deposition will 4 be admissible at trial.

5 2) Deposition Preserves Defendant's Sixth Amendment Right to 6 Compulsory Process

7 "The only recent decision of this Court dealing with the right to compulsory process 8 guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment suggests that more than the mere absence of testimony is 9 necessary to establish a violation of the right." See Valenzuela-Bernal, at 867 (witnesses 10 deported before interviewed by defendant). "Indeed, the Sixth Amendment does not by its terms 11 grant to a criminal defendant the right to secure the attendance and testimony of any and all 12 witnesses: it guarantees him 'compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor.'" 13 Valenzuela-Bernal, at 867, (quoting U.S. Const., Amdt. 6). "[D]efendant cannot establish a 14 violation of his constitutional right to compulsory process merely by showing that deportation of 15 the [witness] deprived him of [his] testimony. He must at least make some plausible showing of 16 how [his] testimony would have been both material and favorable to his defense." See 17 Valenzuela-Bernal, at 867 (emphasis added); see also Fed. R. Crim. P. 17(b) (requiring 18 Government to subpoena witnesses on behalf of indigent defendants "upon a satisfactory 19 showing . . . that the presence of the witness is necessary to an adequate defense.").

20 In this case, material witness BARAJAS has been in custody since July 8, 2008. Since 21 that time, the material witness has been available for interview by both defense counsel and the 22 Assistant United States Attorney, who thus have had an ample opportunity to ascertain the 23 substance of any testimony the material witness might provide at trial. Because the material 24 witness's testimony can be adequately preserved by video deposition and he is subject to the 25 subpoena power of this Court, further detention is not necessary to prevent a failure of justice.

26 Moreover, a guarantee from the Government that the material witness will return for trial 27 is not a prerequisite for an order for video deposition. The Government is required only to use 28 reasonable means to insure the appearance of the material witness. See Aguilar-Ayala, at 418.

1 "We gather from these cases that deposition testimony is admissible only if the government has 2 exhausted reasonable efforts to assure that the witness will attend trial. The ultimate success or 3 failure of those efforts is not dispositive. So long as the government has employed reasonable 4 measures to secure the witness' presence at trial, the fact that the witness has nevertheless failed 5 to appear will not preclude the admission of deposition testimony. Such a witness will be 6 deemed 'unavailable.'" Aguilar-Ayala, at 418 (citing Ohio v. Roberts, at 65). Because the 7 material witness' testimony can be adequately preserved by video deposition and he is subject to 8 the subpoena power of this Court, the defendant's rights to compulsory process are protected and 9 the Court must order the deposition and release of the material witness.

10 3) Deposition Preserves Defendant's Fifth Amendment Right to Due 11 Process

12 "Due process guarantees that a criminal defendant will be treated with 'that fundamental 13 fairness essential to the very concept of justice. In order to declare a denial of it we must find 14 that the absence of that fairness fatally infected the trial; the acts complained of must be of such 15 quality as necessarily prevents a fair trial.'" Valenzuela-Bernal, at 872, (quoting Lisenba v.
 16 California, 314 U.S. 219, 236 (1941)). In another context, the Supreme Court held that instances 17 where the Government withholds evidence required by statute to be disclosed constitute due 18 process violations only when they "so infect the fairness of the trial as to make it 'more a 19 spectacle or trial by ordeal than disciplined contest.'" Valenzuela-Bernal, at 872, (quoting 20 United States v. Augenblick, 393 U.S. 348, 356 (1969)) (citations omitted). For there to be a due 21 process violation by release of the material witnesses in this case, the defendant must provide 22 "some explanation of how their testimony would have been favorable and material." Id.

IV.

CONCLUSION

Based on the discussion above, material witness BARAJAS respectfully moves the Court for an order requiring his video deposition to be taken as soon as possible, and for his immediate release from custody upon conclusion of the deposition.
